Dedication

The 1982 Belle is dedicated to the graduating seniors. They came with their minds set on achievement and many of them did. In this brief journey, they shared the realities of being Bennett women, enjoyed the splendor of action, and sought the glory of power. May their tomorrows be filled with accomplishments.

A Metamorphic Experience

The biologist views metamorphosis as "a change in structure without retention of the original form." The simple layman upon hearing the term merely visualizes the various stages through which a caterpillar must pass in order to reach the beautiful stage of butterfly. Both concepts of metamorphosis became a common ideology throughout the college community.

The year was filled with apprehension and misgivings as the shadow of Reaganomics touched the campus reminding each in the process that things were bound to get worse before better. We saw the price of a postage stamp jump to 20¢ ... a decrease in student financial aid ... cut in gas prices offset by the rise in food and car costs ... the dwindling of the American Dream of owning a home as interest rates rose to record highs.

It was a year of public protest ... against the construction of nuclear plants and nuclear disposal sites ... against the registration of college students in Guilford County ... against new federal proposes which are making education for the elite only ... unemployment reached record proportions.

It was also a year marked by violence ... the assassination of Egypt's Sadat ... the child killings in Atlanta ... military spending taking priority over social programs ... the British-Argentine fight over the Falklands.

And finally at Bennett ... The concepts of metamorphosis and change were synonymous. There were the traditional joys, tears, anger, love and sharing. There were the discoveries, the surprises, the distrust, the trust, and all of the experiences that make up campus life.

Three dynamic personalities made their individual impact felt. Bennett welcomed a new dean of student affairs, Dr. Phyllis Forte Ethridge. With a woman dean, students anticipated an exciting year. Our expectations were high and for some short lived. No doubt, in the minds of many of us, the Trevi Fountain Catastrophe will go down in Bennett history as one of the darkest days experienced by contemporary Belles.

Karen Dixon, our SGA president, aggressively moved to evoke greater student involvement and respect for student rights. She challenged both faculty and students to strive for academic excellence. Marching to the beat of military precision, she ruffled a few administrative feathers and sat the wheels of student government into motion.

Ms. Motlalepula Chabaku was a welcomed addition to the college community. As our International Scholar-In-Residence, she attempted to make us aware of the realities of world injustice to women and blacks. An exile native of South Africa, hers was a message of waking up.

The wind of change blew around us. Few will doubt that they were touched. Each experience made its impact, changing us in ways many were unprepared to accept or acknowledge. Every member of the campus community will cherish some personal memories.

Some will sigh with relief that it is over and others will hate to see it end.

Join with us as we recapture the metamorphosis. Hopefully, we will conclude that it was not the bad year it appeared to be. May it challenge you to greater efforts in the coming year. May the good moments reflected here overshadow the bad. May optimism grow as we come to share a common mission and realize why we are here.

In Appreciation

Dr. Miller, our distinguished President, eminent faculty and staff, beloved parents, friends of Bennett College, my sister Bennett Belles. This is truly a major milestone in my life. To be chosen by my classmates to represent them on such a significant occasion is indeed an honor.

This year has been one of reflections for many of our class. Since 1978 Bennett College has been our extended family away from our homes. We arrived as eager, ambitious freshman from all parts of this country and abroad. Many of us were ill equipped for the social adjustment and academic rigor of this institution. Each year brought new and sobering experiences and saw the enhancement of our personal goals and ambitions. Each year brought further refinement of our many talents and abilities. We realized soon that we were nurtured and sheltered by an institution sensitive to the needs and development of young black women. But as with all families, each year saw our family size dwindle as members defected for many various reasons. To paraphrase an old familiar song "The road was rough — The going got tough and the Hills were hard to climb. But many of us had decided a long time ago and there was no doubt in our minds that we were going to make Bennett College our home."

Our college years have been a time of far reaching world events. To name a few: 1. The resurgence and revival of racial bigotry and the Ku Klux Klan. 2. The election of Ronald Reagan as president of the United States and affirmative action and the enforcement of Civil Rights, an administration of heavy budget cuts — of return to states rights and a subtle denial of education guarantees necessary for survival. 3. The energy crisis. 4. The Atlanta killings of young Black children. 5. The launching of space missiles and the beginning of the second space age with all of its many possibilities and ramifications. 6. And most alarming the epidemic state in alcohol and drug usage. These events and many others both local and nationwide created an atmosphere of apprehension tension and fear across the country. It was in this uneasy climate that we struggled to chart the course of our lives.

Today, we rejoice that we have come thus far. Today we begin the celebration of our commencement. This is the beginning of the end. The beginning of that long worked for and awaited day. George Allen, former football coach of the Washington Redskins, was fond of saying (I quote) "The future is Now" (Unquote). This is the future we dreamed of four years ago.

We are grateful that we have been fortunate to attend this prestigious predominantly Black women's institution. We came for many different personal reasons but most of us knew and were impressed with what Bennett College could offer us. The value and place of Black institutions in our society continue to be a topic of debate. The credibility of many of our institutions is being seriously questioned. Cases of educational fraud, mental waste and abuse ranging from modest to monumental are everywhere around us. The status of Bennett College has also been explored. We have rejoiced in the decision that our school will retain its identity and women status and continue to devote itself to the education and advancement of young Black women. The quality and quantity of the education we have received here is immeasurable. Not only do we appreciate the high academic standards demanded of us but also the training we have received to face the realities of the outside world and to improve the quality of life for all people. Our select international student body and faculty have been an educational experience in itself. The offerings and cultural exposure have given us opportunities for personal growth and development. Bennett College is truly one of the outstanding colleges of this country. We will always remember you with love and pride.

As we begin this celebration we pause to pay tribute and respect to many who have made this possible. To the administration, faculty and staff —

our sincere appreciation for your patience, guidance and constant insistence on excellence. You have been constant sources of inspiration in many ways. In many ways you have shown us that you really cared. Most of all we appreciate the outpouring of warmth and sincerity you have extended to each of us in some manner. We want you to know that we are not insensitive to all that you have done for us.

To our parents, guardians and families — we can never say enough. We shall be eternally grateful. You have sustained us with your emotional and material support and we are fully aware of all the effects of the economy and today's deepening recession and of the personal sacrifices on your part. Through it all — you have always managed to come through. Our heartfelt thanks and God bless each of you.

To my sister Bennett Belles of the class of 1982 — we have come a long, long way and today means different things to each of us. The comradeship we have shared has been overwhelming. Our love and concern for each other know no bounds. There have been good times and bad times. Can we ever forget attending A.S.E.S.? The basketball and volleyball games? The solemn beauty of student convocation and commencement marches? The Annual Christmas Candlelight Concerts? The hilarious but well executed faculty follies, parents weekend activities? The festivities accompanying the coronation of Miss Bennett? We have faced great academic and social challenges together. We have cared and shared as we burned the midnight oil. These past four years have prepared us to face whatever confronts us in the future. We shall remember them as the most enjoyable and interesting of our lives. We now prepare to enter a confused and frustrated world, a world of warring and divergent ideologies, a world of conflicting rhetoric and a world described by some as a ticking time bomb. We enter this world confident and unafraid. The number of black college graduates has doubled in the past decade and we are proud to be a part of this trend. The class of 1982 is bolstered with a depth of education, talents, skills and accomplishments unprecedented in our history and necessary for the work world. John F. Kennedy once said (I quote) "Of those to whom much is given — much is required." We accept our new responsibilities individually and collectively. Whatever we do, wherever we may go — may our hopes and dreams be realized in the fullest degree and in the years to come, may our lives reflect credit upon our Alma Mater.

"Bennett now our voices raise Harmonies of grateful praise"

According to a random survey, most students participating indicated that the S.G.A. was a positive force in striving to aid in the upgrading of services to the student body. They also concluded that the S.G.A. officers did a good job in representing their interests.

Said one junior student, "Since I've been here, this year's leadership was the strongest I've experienced. Another said, "The cabinet as whole was one of the strongest, but when Karen leaves, so does one of the strongest leaders on this campus."

A senior added, "I want to see a student body that is more aggressive and assertive in all aspects of campus involvement, from academics to social awareness."

Karen Dixon was faced with one of the largest challenges of her collegiate experience. However armed with her R.O.T.C. knowhow, she succeeded in stirring up the Administration and the student body to think more creatively about the Bennett Experience. Outspoken and ruffling many feathers, she made her position known. Faced with a change in student affairs leadership, the student leaders operated on instinct and precedent. They attempted to work with the new dean of students, but discovered that she was away most of the first semester attending conferences and workshops.

A feeling of frustration often spreaded among the student leaders. Karen noted the inability of chief administrators to respond to her request for student representation on policy making committees that involved students or on the board of trustees. "A verbal agreement had already been obtained from the President of the College at the beginning of the year."

Karen Dixon
President

But all was not lost. In spite of cries of "military dictatorship" within the cabinet ranks, some positive outcomes of the year were generated. Yet, it will be left to Karen's successor to keep the momentum growing. Karen Dixon awakened students to the need for making their concerns known and organizing for action. She indicated the need for the S.G.A. to have a budget and control of that budget. Members of her cabinet stressed the need to have a procedural manual for planning and implementing traditional student activities and for unraveling bureaucratic red tape and double talk.

"It is imperative that we, the students at Bennett, challenge the tenacity of the problems here by fully utilizing the S.G.A., Greek organizations, and the many other networks available, to rectify these devastating problems," Karen stated.

Concluded banner editor Myra George, "The present S.G.A. leadership has waged a tremendous fight against the lack of interest among the student body.

As the mantle of leadership is passed to new leaders, they should digest some basic principles of making themselves heard. "Have a plan of action, complete with alternatives and projected outcomes. Persevere in spite of road blocks. Set timetables and involve more students. Set your own agenda, one that speaks of relevant student concerns." This is the legacy left by the S.G.A. of 1981-82.

OUTSTANDING Belles '82

Cynthia

Cynthia Asbury will be remembered as a vivacious individual who was always willing to "give a helping hand." She was a delightful fixture in Barge Hall for first year students. Listed in Who's Who in 1981 and the recipient of numerous academic honors, she was also active as a peer advisor and Bennett Scholar.

Debra

Debra Moore's charming personality was felt throughout the Education Division and the senior class. She dedicated a great deal of time to the Cerebral Palsy and Orthopedic Handicap School as a girl scout leader. Her academic honors were numerous.

Valerie

Affiliated with several honor societies, Valerie Callender also shined on the basketball court for most of her collegiate days. A friend concluded, "She will be remembered as an independent, vivacious, and compassionate young lady."

Myra

Myra George demonstrated outstanding academic abilities and finished her ISP concentration in three years. As editor of the Banner, she ruffled a few feathers and praised where praise was needed. She was a valuable tutor in the Learning Resources Center. She was the recipient of the President's Excellence Award for two years.

Elisa

"Three times a lady" is the best way to describe scholar Elisa Staley. She distinguished herself as a student leader and as an independent scholar. Her class demonstrated its respect for her by selecting her to deliver the Appreciation Address for Senior Day.

Terri

Terri Phillips was a beautiful creation of talent, feelings, and charm. Representing the college as Miss Bennett, she performed with royal grace. Honored for her intellectual achievements on campus, she also was recognized for outstanding academic achievements during the summer program at McHarry Medical College.

Sharon

Sharon Horton's time was split between her off-campus job and academic pursuits. She was respected and admired by all who shared the experience with her. She represented the Deltas as their coronation queen this year. Skilled in the art of time management, Sharon performed well in the classroom and as a member of several organizations.

Pauline

Pauline Nzeribe, one of three sisters to attend Bennett, was very goal-oriented. She chartered a course marked by success. She is also an adventurer who dared to try the untried. One of the highlights of her college career was a ski trip during the Christmas break of her junior year. She was also president of the International Students Club during her junior year.

Donna

Donna Siler proved that the Bennett Ideal is real and possible. She was a role model for underclassmen who came under her influence as a residence hall counselor. She was available to help faculty and staff to implement programs because she felt a part of the experience. She, too, mixed beauty and brains.

Qundal

Qundal Chambers gained the admiration of the campus community because of her volunteer spirit and pleasing personality. Her sense of humor provided relief for those who came under her spell. She also had her share of academic accomplishments and leadership roles.

These Outstanding Belles marched to the beat of a different drummer. They achieved in the classroom, served in the community, and worked on the campus as student leaders. They demonstrated well-rounded attributes that make up the foundation of the Bennett Experience. They were nominated and elected by their peers and the college faculty for this honor. While others found it difficult to achieve on all arenas, they proved that it could be done. And they did it well.

CAMPUS LIFE

Recognition Day '82

Each year members of the campus community honor those students who have achieved and served the college beyond the call of duty. This year's program received a boost by the Morgan State University Choir which performed two traditional black selections. The program was longed, but worth every minute as we offered tributes and praise to our peers. Awards were given for academic excellence, student involvement, and community service. Mrs. Louise G. Streat did a beautiful job of moving things along. The Belle staff congratulates all of the honorees for 1981-82.

Few of us gave thought to what this liberal arts experience is about. More than anything, we were content to complain about "the relevancy" of classes in religion, the humanities, and philosophy. According to one source, "Liberal arts should teach young people to analyze and to synthesize, to break things down into parts and then to put things together again." An understanding of this concept is necessary and can contribute to eliminating many of the anxieties experienced this year. As we reflect on the year, hopefully, more attention will be given to those value learning activities planned to shape our moral being.

LIBERAL ARTS

Opinions will vary on the quality of student life this year. But it will certainly be remembered as an eventful year . . . "Trevi Weekend," James Baldwin, Junior and Sophomore Weekends, Senior Day, the Coronation, Orientation Week, President's Ball, fun with the Aggies, Joggers Night, Ladies Nights, the President's Student Forum, the diverse personalities, Recognition Day, etc. Whether we slept the year away or became involved in constructive activities, it was a busy year.

Mellon Presents

There's something about the sound A.C.E.S. that says to most students, "another boring program." And often, we were wrong. The Mellon Committee and the Lyceum Committee presented some interesting programs this year, although some of us preferred to watch television or sleep.

But for those who took the time to attend — it was the discovery of new sounds, exciting performances, and opportunities to develop cultural awareness. We were overwhelmed by the talent of Paula Larke who offered insight into black folk history through story and song. She was and is what many of us hope to become, a black woman with a purpose. David Bradley made his The Chaneysville Incident come alive as he discussed perspectives of cultural and social history of his novel. Other attractions: Ward Phillips Duo, Seminar on Women; Dr. Bettye C. Thomas, Black History Lecture; Ronald Crutcher, cellist; the Faculty Forum on James Baldwin featuring Chinua Achebe; Dr. Oakley Holmes, art historian; Eva Hamlin Miller's art exhibit; Opera Excerpts; and James Baldwin.

Basketball

The Bennett basketball team climbed the .500 level, finishing this year's season with a 9-9 record. The flourish created the seventh straight season the Belles have concluded at .500 or better. The season was notable for two reasons: the Belles' inability to do the impossible and match last year's squad's 20-2 record; and the final performance of Portia Dixon at Goode Gymnasium. Like her sister Andre, Portia gave four strong years to the Bennett effort, and she was honored several times with all-league citations. Her presence will be sorely missed next year. Over one four game period this season, she amassed 80 points.

Bennett Players Present . . .

Each year the Bennett Players face the challenge of producing plays on a shoestring budget and from a small offering of all-female plays. This year, members of the Players demonstrated versatility as they assumed two or more parts, doubled as stage hands or directors, and prepared to participate in the National Association of Dramatic Speech and Arts Convocation at Bowie State College. The Players presented two productions, "Glass Menagerie" and "Gray Bread."

The Living Madonnas

The college presented the "Living Madonnas" in December. Coordinated by the Visual Arts, Home Economics, and Music Departments with the assistance of the Maintenance staff, the production, "International Madonnas," was one of the most beautiful presentations witnessed by the college community. The living tableaux, reproductions of works by internationally known artists, represented the joint efforts of some 150 staff, faculty and students.

Among the scenes presented were "The Annunciation" by MacMillan, India; "The Conception of the Virgin" by De Santella, Mexico; "The Nativity" by a South African art student; "The Flight to Egypt" by de Almeida, Brazil; "The Brown Madonna" by Reiss, United States; and "The Madonna of the Pavillion" by Lu Hung-Neine, China.

Background music was provided by the college choir under the direction of Dr. Charlotte Alston. The narrator was Mrs. Mary Hopkins and the reader, Dr. Hortensia Sanchez-Boudy.

"Come Down to Kew In Lilac-Time; It isn't Far From London"

Dr. Helen G. Edmonds is professor emerita of history at North Carolina Central University. She has been the recipient of a number of honorary degrees, fellowships and grants, and honors. Her involvement in international affairs has been recognized through a number of presidential appointments.

For those who wish to review the industrial revolution in England during the early 1900's, they are at liberty to read the scholarly works of the British economist who had profound analyses of the development of the factory system, its ascendancy, and the state of the human conditions which two major British cities so abundantly displayed. In my spiritual orientation to this period, I put the history and economic books aside. I chose to see the deadening effect of the industrial revolution in its human terms through the eyes of the Barral Organ by the British poet, Alfred Noyes. He looked upon the city of Liverpool as the commercial center of England for importation of raw materials and exportation of goods of commerce; but it was the city of London emphasized in the manufacturing of those goods. Hear what Noyes says about the London of his poem: "And then the troubador begins to thrill the golden streets in the city as the sun sinks low. And in all the gaudy busses, there are scores of weary feet — marking time with a dull mechanical beat, and a thousand hearts are plunging to a love they'll never meet in the land where dead dreams go. Come down to Kew in Lilac-time."

Six miles from London in Surrey County is Kew Garden. No one visits London without going to Kew Garden. The poet Alfred Noyes proclaimed that the best time to come to Kew is in Lilac-time: "The cherry trees are seas of bloom and soft perfume, and Oh, so near to London. And there they say, when dawn is high and all the world's a blaze of sky, the cuckoo, though very shy, will sing a song for London. The Dorian Nightingale is rare and yet they say you will hear him there at Kew in Lilac-time, and Oh so near to London. For Noah hardly knew a bird that isn't heard at Kew in Lilac-time. And when the rose begins to pout and all the chestnut spires are out, You will hear the rest without a doubt — all chorussing for London. Come down to Kew in Lilac-time. And you will wander hand in hand with love in summer's wonderland. Come down to Kew in Lilac-time. It isn't far from London."

Who would have thought the organ grinder would play eternal music in this city of London where men and women had not the time to listen nor the appreciation to enjoy:

"For there in this busy city, La Traviata sighs another sadder song And there, Il Trovatore cries a tale of deeper wrong." O Verdi, we mourn, as the troubador begins to thrill the golden street in this city as the sun sinks low; in this city where dead dreams go.

In my address today, the London of Alfred Noyes' poem is used symbolically to examine the major characteristics of our time, the London of our personal lives, the London which baffles us in governmental, collective and personal decision-making. In our London of confusion today, we have but to look at the vast array of unemployed people in our former manufacturing centers. Unemployment is currently 9 to 10 per cent nationwide and that means 18 to 20 per cent for black adults; and 42 to 50 per cent for black youth. The blacks are in the inner cities. Many industries with the jobs are either closing down or moving to the Sun Belt. As the army of unemployed of all races grows, we may aptly compare the poet's words; "thousands of weary feet, marking time with a mechanical beat, plunging to a love they will never meet in this city of London where dead dreams go."

The Founding Fathers of this Nation, with superior insight, separated the ideological and functional aspects of church and state. We are indeed the privileged recipients of freedom of religious worship. Yet, the political realism of the 1980's would indicate that church and state may have merged in some quarters of the nation among certain religious groups. While physical burning at the stake for one's religious beliefs is no longer appropo, the death of leadership roles and political careers may be at stake when select leaders are proscribed on a "hit list" for leadership extinction simply because they proclaimed for a more humane government and espoused the needs of the poor — and this threat has been achieved — all in the name of a "Moral Majority." In our London where the sun sinks low.

In our current London of confusion, we cannot ignore an ethical education. The human body is the temple of God. He builds the spiritual house inside of us. Too few today seem to have been exposed to an exploration of the sources and meaning of values. Few people believe any longer that any values have an "absolute" base. In our London, the fields of philosophy, psychology and sociology pose for us questions of tremendous magnitude: Are moral values to be considered as unchanging eternal verities or are they modified by changes in societal mores? If they are so modified, are we sufficiently aware of the transitions taking place to enable us to lay a foundation for moral stability. A more basic consideration is how does education propose to mold and hold our youth to acceptable standards of morality in the face of multitudinous undermining influences of modern society? How then do we arrive at the all encompassing moral responsibilities for our actions? I do not have all the answers. I must agree with Rabbi Brickner that self-discipline — not externally applied discipline but — that which is born of an inner strength makes the difference between a civilization and a jungle. It is when the human temple is so constructed that it interfaces with the spiritual life can we restore the meaning of values. Otherwise, we go through life excusing every act and every condition — laughing while the moral basis of our society crumbles.

In our London of confusion, we are afflicted with increased crime. Our homes have become virtual prisons to which we are confined after the sun goes down. Senior citizens are prime subjects for mugging and robbery. Where does the responsibility rest? If you have views which are contrary to mine, so be it. I, personally, reject totally the new sociological theory that society is the criminal, not the persons perpetrating the crimes. Values are topsy-turvy.

We have had our London of racial confusion with the youth dreams of the 1960's. They marched so nobly in the interest of racial justice. They were the marching troops of Martin Luther King, Jr. Something happened in 1966. The "Black Power" winds of that year generated small separatistic groups among many of our youth; and with such goals as going back to Africa, recommending the total separation from a white society on the assumption that we could go it alone, organizing schools to prepare young black people for nationhood, advocating that one State in the United States be set aside for The New Republic of Africa, utilizing Black Studies in the 1960's as a vehicle for carping on the past and all the ills which 300 years of history had made our lot, and validating "Black English" as a learning vehicle when there is no such animal as "Black English." Please know that standard English is the language of employment and language of promotion. Our young college students today have emerged from that London of confusion. In the 1980's we have no time to build castles in the sand or live in the phantasies of make believe land. The world is real and there is much to do.

The new image of the 1980's is a "Quiet Revolution" and it has come back to our campuses. This quiet revolution is so quiet that many people are unaware of its far-reaching effects. It promises to touch nearly every aspect of our campus life, including how faculty members teach, how students are educated, and how research is performed. The focus of this quiet revolution is the campus library. Libraries have long histories of campus neglect but they are humming now with students who want open access to information. I find students more career oriented than in many years.

President Lyndon Johnson persuaded the Congress to enact the Higher Education Act of 1965. From this act financial assistance flowed to developing colleges and to students in financial need. The woman selected from across this nation to develop and handle the $120 million program for the predominantly black colleges was the President of Bennett College, Dr. Willa Player. She is enshrined in any history of the Federal Government and Higher Education. President Johnson, writing in Vantage Point, that it was his desire that any youngster who wanted to go to college would have no excuse in that endeavor. The Higher Education Acts provided Basic Education Opportunity Grants, Work-Study Grants, Guaranteed Student Loans, Veterans Education Assistance. Federal funds for the training and re-training of teachers in language arts, science and almost any academic area deemed appropriate by the educational researchers.

Now, in our current London of 1982 we face the serious problem of financial cutbacks and the impact on our depressed economy and on colleges and universities. Sums from philanthropists and foundations for the private and church-related colleges may be affected. After all, their gifts to the United Negro College Fund are conditioned by whether the stock markets rise or fall, whether bonds are lucrative or not. Churches will continue to do their part. The basic factors confirm that the issue for many educational institutions may be one of survival. As graduates and members of the alumnae, you must do some re-assessing. You must learn to live with less and share with this institution a more meaningful part of your income. Come down to Kew Garden and re-assess your relations and responsibilities to your Alma Mater.

While you graduate today, thousands of undergraduate, graduate and professional students are trembling with fear as to whether reduced financial assistance by the federal government will send their high hopes to the city where dead dreams go. Administrators are worried about whether reduced funds in student financial assistance will have an impact upon enrollment in September. If it becomes totally necessary, those who have not yet graduated may have to adapt to a new way of life. In my mind, there are three options:

- 1) Part-time pursuit of education while working.
- 2) Drop out of the student population, save some money and come back to college another day. This will require a strong commitment to keeping the faith with your goals.
- 3) End the educational pursuit forever. This would be the ultimate tragedy.

I would urge all who face either of these dilemmas to step outside of this

London and re-assess. Let us determine if we can pursue our goals with less than that to which we are accustomed.

Most Americans can tighten their belts a bit more. As a nation, we represent six per cent of the world population, yet we consume approximately one-third of the available resources, while sectors of our society suffer from hunger. What we waste and throw away could feed thousands.

I tell young people this about me. I was in school when there was no financial assistance. I set my goals at the Ohio State University and planned my budget on 50¢ a day; 15¢ for breakfast and 35¢ for dinner (Specials). It did not matter what others had to spend. No envy or jealousy ever entered my mind. I was there to get the knowledge from my books and professors. My heart was marching to the beat of a different drummer. For I knew that when my education was complete, the choice of the menu would be mine. Step outside of London. Come down to Kew Garden and think anew.

I cannot portend that the future of women and minorities will be in an era of growing unemployment, reduced budgets, young school drop-outs with no skills for the highly technological society, the lack of re-affirmation for affirmative action, and high interest rates threatening to make home ownership a thing of the past. While this is a part of the sad and distressing story in our London where the sun sinks low, the final recognition is more devastating: The rapidly drying up of the nation's willingness to face up to the seriousness of the problem which years of deprivation have created, and to deal with them with the intensity and commitment their solutions demand. We are not asking that money be thrown at the problem. We want the elimination of fraud.

We want people who are able to work to have jobs available — training for jobs in a serious way and not "playing" at training

While the challenges of our time have been accentuated in this address, all is not dark or hopeless because.

"YOU ARE A BREED APART"

Merrill, Fenner, Lynch and Pearce of New York, internationally recognized stock brokers, have a commercial that is very appealing. A pedigreed steer enters a china shop. He is down one aisle and up another several time and never breaks an item of the most delicate displays — defying the age-old cliché that one is as clumsy as a bull in a china shop. It ends the commercial with no disaster. A voice in the background defines the company as well as the animal in these words: "It is a Breed Apart."

You young graduates of 1982 are a breed apart. These are the reasons why you are a breed apart:

1. You have set your star and followed your course. There are freshmen who began with you but who are not here today. Freshmen classes begin to dwindle down between sophomore and junior year. You were steadfast and this very act of persistence makes you a breed apart.

2. Even with a bachelor's degree labor badge, the United States Department of Labor states that you are expected to earn in a life time $825,000; high school graduates, $480,000, and grade school, $345,000.

3. You are a graduate of a women's college during the International Decade for Women and you are expected to highlight womanhood; to give it a new and added dimension. The Biblical quote remains a truism: "To whom much is given, much is expected."

You will be the bearers of children.

You will be the preservers of culture in your home. As you give your husband love, give the children love abundantly. The outside world is cruel enough and children reared in love, affection and emotional security will be better able to brave the shocks of our imperfect society.

5. You are a breed apart because your generation has mastered change. For the time being, graduates will have to take what jobs they can get. My only plea is that you will graduate with a flexible mind; that, if it is necessary for you to re-tool with some management course, computer science, accounting, etc., then do so. Many go to the community colleges only for a certain technical skill. The older generation may not understand this and say why did we send you to a four year college and then you decided to go to a community college. Please explain patiently to them that you are only there for one and only one reason: some specialized course which will tide you over until the opening returns for which you have spent four years.

Go where the jobs are as soon as they break. Your generation can master change. You will change careers, no doubt, three times in your life-time, and begin payments on at least three homes. Rivers and streets and neighbors next door will not hold you as they did us — just plain afraid of leaving the locality. You will go any place for work because you can master change. You are young. You are not tired like many of us.

6. You are graduating at a time when black women — almost 1000 are elected to city councils, 43 in state legislatures, three as superintendents of city schools in the largest cities — Oakland, Washington and Chicago. In your time as many as four were elected to the United States Congress: Shirley Chisholm, Yvonne Burke, Cordiss Collins and Barbara Burke. In appointments, one of us reached the President's Cabinet: Patricia Roberts Harris — now running for Mayor of Washington, D.C. For more than 20 years, Constance Baker Motley was the only black woman in the Federal Courts. The Omnibus Judiciary Act of 1978 created 152 new judgeships and President Carter appointed eight. I have not cited the figures for men elected and appointed offices. They have exceeded us. Young women today who are public service-minded may enter the political arena. The way has been paved.

7. There is the possibility of finding allies in our struggles. Much will depend upon locating these allies in churches, in the higher structure of local decision-making, and in the groups which are experiencing similar difficulties. Our cries against the federal cuts in education are voiced by white students and white parents. The problem of high interest rates are not just black problems. They are national problems. Once again, we must resort to net-working with similarly situated groups, irrespective of race, for our own salvation. No one has been more successful in net-working as the National Organization of Women. While it will require a miracle to secure the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA), I have found in 36 states that these women support black female candidates for state legislatures. While there were rank enemies who despise Martin Luther King, Jr., this man knew how to find and pull together powerful allies. Net-works may change, dependent upon the issue.

You need merely to come down to Kew and take inventory of your assets.

God bless you. May He make His face to shine upon you. May He hold you in the hollow of His hand. With these blessings, clearly Alfred Noyes' symbolic poem on London and Kew Garden speaks to our times. It speaks to the issues of higher education; it speaks to the young graduates; it speaks to the immediate past of the revolutionary era of the 1960's and 1970's; it speaks to the computerized society which has produced the alienated man; It speaks to the urban cities where dead dreams go; it speaks to the thousands of unemployed marching feet, weary in the sunset glow; it speaks to the human spirit caught up in the baffling forces of the current political disillusionment of the 1980's, it speaks to the demand for new racial strategies for the contemporary period of the new conservatism; it speaks to the nation's unfinished agenda with regards to minorities whose glimmering hope seems doomed. Indeed, It speaks to each of us. The message it brings is resoundingly clear:

"There is a place where cherry trees are seas of bloom and sweet perfumes, and Oh, so near to London. And there they say when dawn is high and all the world's a blaze of sky; the cuckoo, though shy, will sing a song for London. The Dorian Nightingale is rare and yet they say you will hear him there, at Kew at Lilac-time. For Noah hardly knew a bird of any kind that isn't heard at Kew. And when the rose begins to pout and all the chestnut spires are out, you will hear the rest without a doubt — chorussing for London. Come down to Kew at Lilac-time; it isn't far from London."

May we never smirch the good
 Gendered here in sisterhood;
 May we ever choose aright,
 Guided but by honor bright;
 Ever lovelier shalt thou live,
 As thy daughters freely give;
 Ever glorious above,
 Testimonies of our love.
